But, I also want to populate another datagrid, and only when a column in the first grid is changed, the second grid is populated. Any ideas? Thanks A: Add the following RowCommand to the button: protected void btnChangeFoo_Click(object sender, EventArgs e) { foreach(GridDataItem item in gridGrid.Items) { GridDataItem itemBackup = item; if (item.Row == -1) { // no more grid to show after button click; if (itemBackup.Controls.Count > 0) itemBackup.Controls.Remove(itemBackup.Controls[0]); break; } } if (gridGrid.Items.Count > 0) gridGrid.DataSource = null; gridGrid.DataSource = collection; } Make sure the button is inside a templatefield so you can use the RowCommand event. If not you'll have to use the ID of your button as the event parameter. ' /> Then your collection would be replaced by the grid. Hope this helps.
