but after i try to decrypted it it show me some errors like 5C41F88C-49B3-4F81-9C06-0F2946C2E0C7 A: This is an exploit of Adobe Reader. The vulnerability is this. The public key has a single 0-bit as the first byte. The resulting code will corrupt the data and this appears to lead to a crash of the application. Plugins for Adobe Reader have been known to cause similar issues, but I'm not sure if this has a similar root cause. Q: SQL Server CE query creation I have a simple query that returns the data from a table, it returns 3 columns with different data types but that shouldn't be the problem. The query itself returns the right data, but when I try and see the data via the data grid control I get I know this is to do with the datatype issue, but I'm not sure how to fix it? Do I set up the query to return the correct data type? Is it to do with the way I define the query? Thanks for the help. EDIT: I've added the fields to the query, but the query still doesn't function. SELECT d.EmployeeID, d.CreatedDate, d.EmployeeName, CAST (s.Status AS VARCHAR(100)) AS Status FROM Employee e INNER JOIN Status s ON e.EmployeeID = s.EmployeeID A: Try this - SELECT e.EmployeeID, e.CreatedDate, e.EmployeeName,

Manipulating a string with jquery to make it a date I have a date string which is in this format: dd/mm/yyyy. I would like to make it a date in jquery, and if someone has a better solution than converting it to a date, I would like to hear it. A: If you just need to parse a date from a string, try var d = new Date(storedDate); Where storedDate could be "11/1/11" or whatever. If you need to go the other way around, you can use momentjs, like so: moment("11/1/11").format(); - 1 0 * g * * 3 + 8 * g *

* 2 - 4 L e t f (u) = 1 3 * u * * 3 + 6 * u * * 2 + 6 * u + 6 . L e t l (y) b e t h e f i r s
