What happened to the designer's phone? It disappeared without a trace, but after the designer leaves his room, a key falls on the table. The package looks like it contains a phone, but the phone is a mystery. It's unlike any phone he has ever seen. This game is based on the concept of Visual Novel.The player controls the protagonist. The protagonist only has two choices for each decision.The story and scenes are presented through a combination of text and illustrations.The game features Nendoroid figures, a popular figure collecting game.Chapter 1: The Owner Chapter 2: The Man Behind the Door Chapter 3: There is a Secret Room The graphics are beautifully drawn and the game looks amazing on the smartphone. (Author's Note: This game is set on a different location than the first VN, so if you finished the first, you'll get some answers here.If you haven't played the first VN, then you'll get the basic story and a few sidequests here as well.)The protagonist has just started his work and has a strange phone in his hand.He started to work at a shop and the owner of the shop told him to bring his "friend" to show him the room.The owner has a troubled past, and his friends seem to be aware of this.When they entered the room, they found a strange person.After that, they went to the bedroom to make love.Unfortunately, the phone was stolen away from him.The protagonist can only catch a glimpse of the thief.They finished their lovemaking, and they left the room. They were greeted by the owner's friend, an elegant man.The protagonist is surprised, because he didn't expect anyone else in the room. The owner told the protagonist to collect ten pieces of silverware and a letter.The letter seems to be important.The protagonist decided to collect the pieces of silverware.He was puzzled by the phone he had.The man revealed himself to be the owner's best friend and he told the protagonist he had a strange phone, and then he left.Later on, he began to have strange dreams.He began to think something was going to happen.The owner was late again and he was worried about the last words he told him.The protagonist's last name is Flay.He felt sorry for the owner and he decided to go to the bedroom.The owner's friend interrupted the protagonist and

Story by Melanie Kristine Noell Robin had wanted to tell Sebastian they were together for a couple of months when he came out of the bathroom shaving after work. She wanted the truth. She felt like some things were easier to say after a night's sleep. But Sebastian was being impulsive for such an important conversation and she couldn't let his impulsiveness interfere with their relationship. So she simply said, "How's living with all those kids," and looked down at his arm that was still wrapped around her waist. "Oh, they're like the army here. All day I run to untangle my suitcase from them, stop by their rooms to help them pack, share a book with them when they're stuck on something, remind them what it takes to study for that AP test in a week, schlep them to and from school, make dinner for them when they're hungry, and dodge their little feet on the floor all over the place. It's kind of overwhelming," he said. "Dodge their little feet? Is that what you do?" she said laughing. "It's kind of what I do. That's why you hate laundry so much," he said, caressing her ear. She responded by lying down on her back and lying on top of him. "Because of the diapers?" she said, rolling on top of him. "So now you like diapers?" he said. "Only yours," she said, kissing him on the nose. They moved to a different spot on the bed. "I got a great idea," he said, coming up to her, "We ought to tackle cleaning our room first thing in the morning." "You can dream up a better idea then that?" she said, nudging him. "So, whaddya say?" he said, pretending to be shocked by her nudge. "What could be better than cleaning out our room together," he said, slipping his arm around her waist. She leaned in and kissed him on the nose. "I can't see why we need to hurry it up," she said, "what I like best

Q: Calculate the data-attribute value of each div I want to add a data-attribute for each div (for example width and height) I tried to add data-attribute data-width and data-height, but this function is not working and it doesn't calculate the "data-attribute value of each div" I tried to do it with this code, but i can't use jquery selector in it, i need to use javascript. $(function() { $('.data').each(function() { $(this).data('width', $(this).width()); $(this).data('height', $(this).height()); }); }); I just want to add data-attribute value of div in the each loop, so that i will have "width:200px; height:200px; border:2px solid red" in each div. A: Use the attr function for that: $(function() { $('.data').each(function() { $(this).attr('width', $(this).width()); $(this).attr('height', $(this).height()); }); }); Note: You don't have a $(function() {}) wrapper. It's just a matter of style. I've included it here just for readability. Lost (Philippine TV series) Lost is a television program currently airing on DZBB (
