FIFA titles are about gameplay, but FIFA 22 also introduces a host of new features and improvements. The new engine also supports the implementation of full body scanning technology as well as a realistic physics engine, which will be used on the ball to more accurately replicate real-life physics when kicking, passing and shooting the ball. The new features also include "Defend mode," which uses the ball's physical properties and AI to make players more aware of the oncoming dribbles, shots and crosses. FIFA 22 features have also been designed to make players more aware of their teammates, and players will now better understand where their teammates are on the pitch. FIFA 22 also introduces a third player story assistant, which will aim to enhance the experience by bringing back players to the pitch. Also being introduced for FIFA 22 are "Ways to Play", an all-new way of interacting with modes. This feature will allow players to play quicker and increase their enjoyment using a host of new ways to play, including the ability to dribble forwards, backwards, sideways and diagonally on to-be-passed balls, as well as picking up the ball using a variety of body parts like the head, the neck, the waist, the shins, the ankles and the hands. "We're pleased to bring to you a FIFA experience unlike anything you've ever played before with FIFA 22," said Matt Prior, SVP and Executive Producer at EA SPORTS. "In addition to revamping the game's new engine, we've also introduced new features to enhance the total player experience, including the hyper motion technology, the enhanced defender mode and new ways to play. This game will bring football fans around the world into a new world of exhilaration and entertainment as the favorite sport of the world continues to evolve." FIFA 22 is also being powered by the new Euphoria' engine. The new engine brings new features and improvements to create a more immersive overall gameplay experience.
