The objective of this review is to provide a critical analysis of the cornea response to the stress factors. Experimental studies demonstrate the existence of a variety of keratocyte responses. These observations are well integrated in the "Apoptosis-Migration" model which allows to anticipate the successive phases of wound healing. In addition, it has to be pointed out that the cornea is also exposed to several stress factors during clinical use. These factors can be either extrinsic (e.g. eye rubbing, scarification, injury) or intrinsic (e.g. wear, inflammation, infection). In the last part of the review, the authors propose to underline the importance of combining both the analysis of the cornea stress factors response and the improvement of the modern corneal stroma substitutes in order to guarantee the best possible results of refractive surgery.Q: Limit of $\lim_{n \rightarrow \infty} n! \times x^n$ I need to find the limit of the function $f(x) = n! \times x^n$. I know that for $x = 0$, the function is 0 , so the limit is 0 by definition of limits, so that's the easy part. I'm not sure about what to
